

ABSTRACT

A method of uncovering a putative insect repellent or attractant is provided. The method is effected by identifying volatiles differentially emitted from a plant infected with a virus and identifying at least one of the volatiles thereby uncovering the putative insect repellent or attractant.